AWAKENING GREAT NEED OF ENGLAND

First American Woman to Drive War Ambulance is Back Home.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Mrs. Bartlett Boder of the first American woman to drive an ambulance in the European war is back in New York. She told thrilling stories of her few months at the front.

Mrs. Boder is a New Yorker, but she is going back to England before Christmas. "I can't keep away," she declared. "It is all so fascinating. It lays a spell on you; the soldiers in their uniforms, the gay bands, the great camps, the air of expectancy for whatever the day may bring."

Mrs. Boder is only 24 years old and a great athlete. She runs a car and knows more about its mechanism than most men do. When the war broke out she was living in France, but went immediately to England and offered her services as an ambulance driver. She wears the regulation khaki suit with breeches and an army coat when in service.

"I have been as far from any woman dreads go," she exclaimed enthusiastically. "I have been to the principal basic hospitals in France. I have carried wounded soldiers from the battle front to the hospitals, but the thing I want the most of anything in the world is to drive the great army trucks which carry provisions to the men. I could do it too, just as well as any Tommy. Only it takes the red-taped English government to get it through its funny British head."

In Still Asleep. "England is still asleep," Mrs. Boder continued. "As a fighter the average Englishman is a topping success, but he wants to do the proper thing even at the battle front. Why I have seen Boers work and pull every string they could to get in one of the so-called 'royal' regiments, especially the gunners' corps. They knew it meant certain death, but they didn't care because it was the swagger regiment of a certain battalion. "England isn't uneasy. England doesn't yet know she is fighting for her life. Some of her wisest men see it, but the mass of the people sit back and just watch events in self righteous complacency. Their ego is so colossal, nothing has yet shaken it."

"If a Zeppelin raid really did get to Trafalgar square it would be the best thing that could happen to England. Nothing but German bombs dropped at their very doors over and over again will rouse the men of England to united effort. Don't Cafe Continental. "The common people in England do not care a continental about the war and they do not hesitate to say so. They know how much depends on them and they are making a great show of parading their importance. They take the whole sidewalk—the laborers do and they seem to gloat over the numbers of the royal families and the nobility who have been killed."

"Sure it's their fight let them go to it," is their attitude. The nobles, they say, 'are fighting for their castles and their land. We have nothing so we won't fight.' That's why England will have to resort to conscription. "Already she is starting individual registration. Every man, woman and child in the British isles within the past two weeks has had to sign a paper telling age and special fitness for any gun line of work. These records are to be kept and even if a person is an American citizen and in England the signer may be called on for service if urgent need arises."
